The wife tried to get me to play it after complaining about the crack, we played 2 hours and it still. Of course I let her play after getting her good. The statement said that the two sides reached a "consultative agreement" about the Doha Declaration to be signed on the sidelines of the meeting. The agreed text of the declaration had been "discussed in a separate negotiation" and the two sides "reached a consensus on the main points," it said, adding that "prior information" on the text "was provided" to the other side. The US and its allies are hoping the meeting will help close gaps over issues such as Iran's ballistic missiles and the fate of the Syrian war and the future of the UN-led political process. The meeting was announced last month by US President Donald Trump and his Saudi and Emirati counterparts, who in turn said the two sides were in contact about "adjustments to the initial agreement" to fight terrorism. The meeting on June 25 and 26 in the Saudi capital Riyadh will be attended by delegations from the US, Israel, Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Jordan, Egypt, Morocco, Kuwait, Qatar, Bahrain, Yemen, as well as officials from the Organisation of the Islamic Cooperation (OIC) and Arab League. This would be the first time the US and its regional allies discuss issues of pressing concern in the Middle East in public. The US-Saudi alliance is the most important strategic alliance in the Middle East. Based on the briefing, Al Arabiya's Middle East region editor said, "Despite the importance of this meeting, the differences between Saudi Arabia and the US should not be overblown." "There is no secret ... mutual desire for an improvement in ties between both countries but it has taken decades for US-Saudi relations to improve," said Al Arabiya's Jad Chaoui. The two countries' interests have
